

About Event Sponsorship

Levels of Event Sponsorship for Corporations

Celebrating its 34th year in 2017, The World Series of Birding is the country's largest and most prestigious birding competition and provides participants and sponsors with a fun and interactive way to raise money for critically needed conservation priorities and New Jersey Audubon's mission: connecting people with nature and stewarding the nature of today for the generations of tomorrow.

Sponsorship of the World Series of Birding demonstrates that you sponsor one of North America's most celebrated conservation events and that you are also concerned about preserving habitat and saving the environment. When you consider that the American birding market is over 81 million individuals, the message is simple. Being part of the World Series of Birding elevates your environmental image and puts you in partnership with some of the world's most respected conservation organizations, not just for the day of the event, but all year long.

The World Series of Birding allows sponsors to gain visibility and build relationships with current and prospective influencers, well-educated, well-informed, affluent clients, locally, nationally, and from around the world. To that end, the following sponsorship benefits are offered. Customized packages are also available.

Other Event Sponsor Benefits

At the very least, you will gain the recognition and publicity of being a major player in this event. The media loves this event! Just take a look at the list of media outlets that have featured the World Series of Birding, including 20/20, The Martha Stewart Show, The Daily Show, National Geographic Magazine, and National Geographic Explorer, Animal Planet, The Wall Street Journal and the documentary, Opposable Chums – The Guts and Glory of the World Series of Birding, which has been an official selection for several North American film festivals, and has won several independent film maker awards.

All of which is why, as a fundraiser and as a publicity engine, this event is without peer. A lot of time and effort goes into any successful fundraising effort, and New Jersey Audubon's World Series of Birding is catalytic and cost effective. You can see this is the success of this event and we'd enjoy the opportunity to prove this to you.
